Course Overview

One of the goals for the JPSM M.S. program is to provide all students with a broad perspective on the Federal statistical system and the issues faced by government statisticians. This course examines the economic and social information system of the U.S. Federal government as well as the role of the survey research professional in that system. The syllabus is structured to provide an overview of the Federal statistical system as it currently exists and to introduce students to options for reform of that system. Invited visitors will include the Chief Statistician of the Office of Management and Budget and the heads of several of the Federal statistical agencies.

Preparing for Guest Speakers

All of the visitors invited to speak to the class are busy people with significant professional responsibilities. We are fortunate that they are willing to share their time with us, and students are expected to be well prepared for these class sessions. In the week prior to the visit of a guest speaker, students will develop questions for the speaker, drawing on the relevant agency web pages and/or reading material handed out in class. The questions will be submitted online no later than midnight on Sunday before each Tuesday's class.
